Montana Career Lab is more than a resource to aid in career planning. The website features a collection of resources, including publications, videos, activities, and online information to help make informed decisions about your future. Our publications walk users through each step of career planning, from exploring interests to preparing for a job interview. This includes the Montana Career Information System (MCIS), an all-in-one career planning system that lets users search for and save detailed information on occupations, programs of study, scholarships, and interest assessments.

The MCIS is the state's official career information delivery system-providing occupational and educational data and materials to help Montanans learn about the world of work and education. This access allows people to research, plan, and document their career path in a systematic way. This system is designed to allow you to start your Montana journey at any point in your education or professional path. We work with schools, colleges, social agencies, and businesses who provide career guidance and employee development services.

If you are a business and want to see what is happening in your community with job openings, research salary range and job applications, the MCIS can help you obtain this information as well as identify skills needed for various careers.

" MCIS offers a free resource for students, parents and importantly employers. As a resource it helps answer student and parents questions on job/career planning giving details needed to pursue employment opportunities. Employers can utilize MCIS to gather data on salaries and job positions for recruiting their own workforce talent. It is a critical resource for the workforce community. I highly recommend this free valuable resource." Chris Manos
